COLONY PROMOTERS SUE SHERIFF

Ask $100,000 Damages From Sheriff and Lawyer

A suit asking $100,000 damages has been filed in the circuit court at Joliet against Sheriff John D. Walker and A. H. Krusemark, Frankfort attorney, by Chicago promoters of "New Liberia", a negro settlement which they propose to establish in Frankfort township.

Included in the same suit is a bill for injunction, asking that the sheriff and Mr. Krusemark be restrained from interfering with the sale or occupation of the site selected for the colonization scheme.

Promoters of the plan claim in their bill they have title to the Scheer-Rahn farm in Frankfort township, about one mile north-east of Frankfort and that attorney Krusemark, the sheriff and the citizen's committee of Frankfort have interfered with their sale of the property causing them damage to the extent of $100,000.00.

The combination damage and injunction suit was filed by a negro lawyer of Chicago for George J. Haberer, Albert Harberer and Andrew J. Lane. The Haberers are white and Lane is colored.

Notice of the suit must be served on the defendants by Dr. E. A. Kingston, coroner, or one of his deputies as provided by law, because of the sheriff being involved in the action.

The promoters desire a temporary injunction and ask that it be made permanent at a later hearing.

Hearing on the temporary injunction probably will be held before Judge Hill next week.

About a year ago the same colored colony promoters negotiated for the Chamberlain farm in New Lenox township and later when Mr. Chamberlain refused to give them an abstract of title they brought a damage suit against him in the Will County Circuit Court and this suit has not come up for a hearing. Mr. Chamberlain resides in California.

Serg. Cleveland of Oak Lawn Arrests Woman's Assaulters

Desk Sergeant John Cleveland of the Oak Lawn Police Dept., arrested William H. Howard, 38, of 6000 S. Park Ave., and Elmer Belford, 30, of 5709 Maryland Ave., on suspicion. After examining the men they were found to be under the influence of liquor. Also a woman's pocket book was found in the car. After they had been put the third degree, they confessed that they had been out stepping in the company of a woman by the name of Mary Sheehan whom they had assaulted. Officer Cleveland found the woman lying in the street about 3 miles from the point where he had arrested the men. Her jaw and nose were broken and she was covered with blood. Dr. Schussler of Oak Lawn was called and ordered her taken to the Burnside Hospital, where it was found that she had been attacked and was in a critical condition.

It is evident that the name of Mary Sheehan is fictitious as she is the mother of four children, and also an owner of a flat building in Chicago.

The defendants claimed that they met her at 60th St. and Stony Island Ave., at which point she asked for a ride and wanted to be taken to some roadhouse or place where she could obtain dinner. The defendants also claim that she had in her possession a bottle of Gin which they all drank and became intoxicated.

The case is set for hearing on Saturday Sept. 12th, 1925 at 3 P.M. before Judge Frank J. O'Brien at which time it is expected a continuance will be granted for the reason that the victim will be unable to appear in court.

Officer Cleveland is to be highly commended for his valiant work as he made the arrest single handed.

Will County Press Association Formed

The Will County Press Association, the first of its kind in Will County, was organized at the Woodruff Inn, Joliet last Friday afternoon following a luncheon. The officers elected are: President, J. Adams, Vedette, Peotone; Vice President, U. S. G. Blakely, Enterprise, Plainfield; Secretary and Treasurer, Wm. Semmler, News-Bulletin, Mokena.

The following code of ethics was adopted by the editors at this meeting:

"The profession of journalism is a high calling of great responsibility; it demands of its individual members sound moral character, honesty of purpose and of performance, courtesy, sympathy, and consideration in their professional relations with each other and with the public. Because of its importance and responsibility, it requires as expert ability, as broad and thorough knowledge and training as any other learned profession.

"To maintain a firm professional standing, the journalist must keep himself free from such social, business, political and other connections as may tend to narrow or bias his judgment or interfere with the full and unfettered discharge of his duties. He must have the courage to tell the truth and to respect the right of privacy.

"The establishing of a firm professional standing requires the creation of an ethical code so generally accepted that it can be enforced by the power of professional opinion, when the charlatan in journalism will take his place with the shyster and the quack.

"The practice of journalism is a quasi-public service. Its function is to tell the news—truth, facts and events; to interpret the news honestly and fairly; and to afford a means of communication for advertisers and such others as the public interest may require. Its duty requires that it shall constantly endeavor to publish nothing that is contrary to the public good.

"The journalist must safeguard himself and his public from selfish interests seeking his aid thru propaganda or other biased or falsified publicity, paid or unpaid.

"No newspaper can print all the truth. It must endeavor to select the news it publishes as to express the many aspects of truth most accurately in fact, in proportion, and in emphasis. News of crime, scandal, and horror should be neither emphasized nor suppressed, but given attention proportionate to its importance in the daily life of decent men.

"The press must be free to tell and to discuss whatever is not expressly forbidden by law. It must be free to emphasize and advocate thru news and opinion such principles and policies as it believes to be the best interest of society without incurring blame for so doing. It must be fair and just; it can not be neutral.

"The press as a business should be conducted with the same honesty, integrity and fair dealing as in editorials and news. Advertising columns must be as clean and honest and trustworthy as news and editorial columns.

"Honest statements of circulation, equitable advertising and subscription rates, and scrupulous separation of the business from the professional departments of the paper are necessary to the best standards of journalism.

"An honest newspaper that serves its public adequately deserves in return a support by that public commensurate with the service and adequate to render it and those who make it independent of other means of support.

1 To promote co-operation among all newspapers for the common good

2 To work for truth and honesty in all departments of our business.

3 To publish in an impartial way free from all personal opinion and bias, the news; to endeavor to be leaders of thought in our editor-

Prof. A. L. Brown Tenders Resignation

The past week was one of big surprises in Mokena school circles when the announcement was made that Prof. A. L. Brown had tendered his resignation to the local school board. Prof. Brown had been re-engaged at the close of the spring term and his resignation was a surprise. The school got busy at once and received quite a number of applications and after due consideration the choice of the board fell on Mr. Lathrop of Beloit, Wis., who came highly recommended and who also was highly endorsed by August Maue, Will County Supt. of Schools. Mr. Lathrop is married and has one child. He has rented the residence of Mrs. Braum and will move his family here shortly. The Mokena school faculty is as follows: Mr. Lathrop, principal; Miss Luetta Darling, Mrs. Ferguson and Miss Olive Norton. The third year high school has not been added as the board has not as yet engaged a teacher for this department altho the board is now considering application.

Prof. Brown taught the Mokena High School department for a number of years and of late has become deeply interested in the Calumet Region real estate boom and it is said that a lucrative offer from the real estate interests there prompted his sudden resignation.

Took Part in Oak Lawn Parade

Thru an unintentional error in our writeup on the Oak Lawn Home Coming Picnic a number of items were omitted. In the children's parade in addition to the three children mentioned in the writeup there were the two little girls of Mrs. J. Cleveland in the parade and the older one pulled the baby on a tricycle that it took the mother several hours to decorate and then there was the grandchild of Mrs. John Moore who was dressed very beautiful. Then there were the ponies of F. O'Brien they were all decorated for the occasion. We regret that these did not get the proper credit in the first writeup, but we hope the old saying "better late than never" holds good in this case.

To Dam Hickory Creek at New Lenox

The Brookwood Park subdivision north of New Lenox has been in a demand for homesites this summer. Over 150 lots have been old for residences and for summer homes. The dwellings which have been erected have about all been sold. A house and lot was sold to a Chicago party a week ago.

Geo. J. Hacker, cashier of the Mokena State Bank and owner of this subdivision is planning to add to the beauty of this subdivision by building a dam across Hickory creek near the bridge. This would make the creek which runs thru the Brookwood Park property deeper and fit for boating and bathing. Mr. Hacker has made application to the state to carry out the contemplated improvement which will greatly add to the value of the property.

The setting off of 1,700 pounds of dynamite completed the great engineering project of moving the Schuylkill river a distance of a half a mile at Port Clinton, Pa. The new road for which the course of the river was shifted represents an expenditure of $500,000 and eliminates a "U" curve and two obsolete bridges. Editor of "Health."

(©, 1925, Western Newspaper Union.)

WHY WE BATHE

DURING the reign of one of the dissolute kings of the old French monarchy, a great fete and pageant was planned to amuse and entertain the king and his courtiers. In one of the tableaux, it was necessary to have a child represent a golden cupid. So the child of one of the court attendants was selected for the part. He was covered from head to foot with gold leaf. The spectacle was a grand success and the little golden boy was greatly admired. But unfortunately he died a few hours later, as a result of having his skin covered for hours with an air-tight, waterproof covering.

We all know that if we wear a rubber coat in the rain, when we take it off it is apt to be as wet inside as it is outside. Many a waterproof coat has thus fallen under suspicion of not being what the makers or the dealers guaranteed it to be. Yet it was truly waterproof and so kept moisture from getting out as well as getting in.

The skin is something more than a covering for the body. It is also a heat regulator and an important excretory organ. If given a fair chance, it keeps the body at the same temperature, winter and summer. It also excretes a large amount of water from the body. If the pores of the skin are choked up, then double work is thrown on the kidneys and if this goes on for any long period of time, the kidneys are overworked and may break down or be irritated so as to greatly interfere with their work.

In the summer when we sweat freely, most of the surplus water in our bodies is excreted by the skin, so that the excretion from the kidney is small in amount, highly concentrated and dark in color. In the winter, when we perspire less, the kidney excretions are large in amount, greatly diluted and pale straw color. These variations, due to natural causes and entirely normal, have caused many people much uneasiness.

Why do we bathe? To remove the dirt and dried perspiration that would otherwise clog our pores. We have learned from race-old experience that when the skin is kept clean we are not as much affected by changes of temperature. We are cooler in summer and warmer in winter and we are less subject to chilling by sudden change of temperature. The nearer man lives to nature the less he needs to bathe. The more artificial our lives, the more artificial means we have to use to keep our skins working.

SUMMER COMPLAINT

EVERY mother and every nurse knows that the first summer of a baby's life is a critical period. Babies in the first year of life stand heat badly. Even if the weather is comparatively cool, many of them fall victims to those stomach and bowel disturbances generally known as "summer complaint."

Some form of bowel trouble is responsible for one out of every five deaths among infants. Diarrhea causes more deaths than measles, scarlet fever, whooping cough, typhoid and diphtheria all put together. It kills more babies in the first two years of life than those other five diseases do at all ages. In Illinois, for instance, the state health department finds that in the last six years measles, scarlet fever, whooping cough, typhoid and diphtheria killed 15,696 babies while diarrhea killed 19,580 babies under two years. One-half of these deaths occurred in July, August, September and October. The number of deaths in August was three times the number in December.

Why do these stomach and bowel disturbances occur in such large number in the summer? Dr. L. Emmet Holt of New York, one of the leading authorities on children's diseases, says that it is due to two causes: impure milk and heat and that it is not the outdoor heat so much as the stifling heat of the house that kills the baby.

Artificial feeding is another important cause, according to Holt. Only five per cent, or one out of twenty babies which die of summer complaint, are breast fed. So the baby nursed by its mother has five times as good a chance of escaping this disease as one that is bottle fed or given some prepared food.

Next to mother's milk, Holt considers cleanliness, fresh air and quiet as important. The baby must be kept clean. A bath every day and in very hot weather twice a day, morning and evening, is necessary. The baby must be kept cool. Just as little clothing as possible and as much outdoor air as possible will help to protect him from sickness.

Protect the baby from flies. Give him plenty of cool air and sunshine. Keep him clean and keep everything around him clean. Feed him breast milk or if he must be given artificial food, clean milk pasteurized or boiled and kept clean and cool until feeding time. Give him plenty of water and a cool airy sleeping place at night and his chances for escaping summer complaint will be greatly increased.

CAMPING AND PROBLEM OF FOOD

There is no healthier sport than camping. During the warm and balmy spring and summer days, it is real recreation. To get out in the fresh air and sunshine, free from worry and care, enhances the health of anyone. He be office man, salesman or what not.

But due to the entirely inadequate means of food preservation and refrigeration found in the majority of camps, there is the ever-present danger of sickness from infected foods. The utmost care must be taken in order that this may be avoided. Butter and eggs should be bought only as used. The milk is a problem in itself. Perhaps the solution lies in the use of a milk other than market milk, in order that purity and sterility may be assured. For such use, evaporated milk is ideal. Many people are wont to confuse evaporated and condensed milk but there is no similarity between the two. Condensed milk is a combination of sugar and milk and can be used only when both of these substances are desired. Evaporated milk is merely pure, fresh milk with about sixty per cent of the water removed and the nutrient content left intact. It is absolutely sterile and pure, having been sterilized before leaving the factory. The water, removed by evaporation, may be replaced very easily and the milk returned to its original volume. Evaporated milk may be obtained in small cans, containing six ounces or in larger ones containing sixteen and can be taken to the camp in quantities sufficient for the needs of the entire period, thus assuring a constant supply of pure, fresh milk without the worry or the danger attached to the use of the market product.

Following are recipes for a few dishes that are best adapted for camp consumption because of ease of preparation, purity and food value.

Tomato Soup.
1 pint tomato pulp 1 1/2 cups water or canned tomato soup Salt and pepper to taste
1 1/2 cups evaporated milk 1/2 tsp. soda
Bring tomato pulp or soup to the boil, add the seasonings and soda. Heat the milk and water and combine slowly with the tomato mixture.

Stirred Eggs.
1/2 cup evaporated milk 1/2 tsp. paprika
1/2 cup water 2 tbsp. fat
1/2 tsp. pepper Grated cheese.
Beat the eggs, add the milk, water and seasonings. Melt the fat in a frying pan. Add the egg mixture and stir until the mixture is creamy. When almost done, sprinkle with grated cheese. Serve on slices of bread, toast or crackers.

What Seemed Humorous

Mother was entertaining a caller, when suddenly Dorothy, who had been playing on the floor, yawned prodigiously. "My, what a big yawn for such a little girl!" exclaimed the caller. "Yes," agreed Dorothy, "and the funny part is that I wasn't listening at all to what you were saying!"

Great "Third Estate"

The "Third Estate" in French history was that part of the nation that belonged neither to the nobility nor the clergy; in other words, the common people who finally brought about the great revolution.

Its Advantage

They were discussing the advantages of the various college courses. "So you've decided on an art course instead of a scientific course?" inquired the girl. "Oh, yes," answered the youth, "it seemed the better course for me." Her next question was, "Why?" and his reply to that was, "Well, everybody says it's easier to forget."

Cameos

The word "cameo" is not the name of a gem. It is merely a method of cutting. In other words, any hard substance or gem can be made into a cameo, although usually onyx, sardonyx, agate and ivory are used.

Producing Liquid Air

Liquid air is a transparent, limpid and intensely cold liquid, slightly blue in color, and of about the same density as water. It is prepared by subjecting air to great pressure and then cooling it by its own expansion to a temperature below the boiling point of its constituents (nitrogen, 194 degrees centigrade; oxygen, 183 degrees centigrade). Its chief use is as a refrigerant.

We Must Work Together

EVERY thoughtful citizen of this community is interested in its development and progress. There's no question about that! We all want our children to enjoy better homes, better schools, better parks—more agreeable surroundings and greater comforts.

We all want our town to keep step with its neighbors, to take the lead in civic affairs. So there is only one sound plan for us to follow:

We must work together to increase the wealth of this community by doing everything we can to encourage local business.

When you and your family patronize our advertisers—the stores and banks of our town—and keep your money in circulation right here at home, there is no power on earth that can prevent our progress.

MOKENA

Mokena's two Ball Teams played excellent ball Sunday, bringing home the bacon in both games. The Junior team defeated the New Lenox team 14 to 0 and the Senior team defeated Forest Park 18 to 0. Who says Mokena can not play ball!

Mokena's Village water department appears to be haunted by the Jinx of old. Recently the pump went out of commission and Monday morning a big leak in the main was discovered. Status of Orland

High School Case

University of Colorado,
Boulder, Colo.

This is in behalf of Miss Dorothy E. Davis whose address is 7147 Princeton Ave., Chicago and who for the past five years has had charge of the high school at Orland in Cook County.

She is a graduate of the University of Chicago and she is a very unusual young woman of exceptional personality. I have visited her school and observed it carefully in my official visits and have kept track of her work and know that it is one of the outstanding illustrations of HOW TO DO the kind of thing that is needed in many schools.

She is, in my judgment, well qualified to do work in any high school and is gifted by nature and by her training in a remarkable degree. I have referred to my visits to her school many times in public addresses and in conferences with superintendents and principals.

I have definitely recommended her for several positions which she has declined because of her devotion to the experiment she was working out at Orland. We have carried the school on our list of recognized small high schools ever since she went there, and this recognition was due almost wholly to Miss Davis herself, and what she was doing there.

Yours very truly,
JOHN CALVIN HANNA,
Supervisor of High Schools,
Home address: Springfield, Illinois.

This is a resume of my address at graduation. When I had finished I asked the audience publicly and from the platform if anyone wished to correct or add to any of the foregoing remarks. No one offered to make corrections or additions. Two of the three board members were present, Mr. Kenny, a new man in Orland was not present. The Country Life Director, Miss McMahon was on the platform, the Methodist minister and the speaker with the other high school teacher, Miss D'Andrea and the graduates.

As I have had so many inquiries concerning the status of the school and this whole affair, I wish that you would publish this letter. This is surely not too much to ask as it is a matter of considerable importance to the community and to me.

An Appeal to Fair Minded Citizens

BY ANDREW J. LANE

Is it not strange that some of the people who are trying to block our efforts in connection with the building of this town, were the same individuals who, a few years ago, made the assertion that the Negro was not a fit subject to inhabit a respectable neighborhood. Now since the Negro is desirous of leaving their so-called respectable neighborhood, to build what in his mind is a respectable neighborhood, all manner of unjust opposition is offered him by these same persons. Why this change of attitude? This unwholesome procedure well describes the story of "The Dog with Two Bones". We are sure that no fair thinking person, who has any regard for rights of others, would undertake the use of such unfair methods for the purpose of crushing the aspiration and ambition of a struggling and depressed people.

If the Negro is unfit to live in large cities and enjoy the same rights as other men, why not encourage him in the building up of his own community, and by so doing prove your respect for the law of the land, which declares all men equal, and demonstrates the expression. "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you."

WHERE MONEY IS A NUISANCE

Americans have reason to be thankful for their simple and reliable money. The complications of the Chinese currency are endless. China possesses 72 different money values. As to the money of account, the Kaikuan Tael, familiar in connection with the customs, the Hankow, Kuantung, Esaoing, Tookwai and others, each differ by varying percentages of weight from the "Hlang," or Chinese ounce of silver. If a traveler from Shanghai were to make an extended tour into the interior, passing through the districts where a manifold variety of coins circulate, the constant exchange from one weight or coin to another would dissipate a very large part of his capital.

An experienced traveler has been known to take scales with him, and still his weights and the purity of his silver were subjected to dispute in different provinces. At coast ports, Mexican, Yuan, Dragon, Hong-Kong and Hankow dollars are all current, each having its own defined exchange value in the native market, while in the interior the added intricacies of dealing with cents and copper cash are so great that it is astonishing how business can be carried on without endless disputes and a considerable handicap to trade.

Legal Phraseology

Escrow is a writing which has been fully executed but which has been placed in the keeping of a third party, to be held by him until such time as the specified conditions under which the instrument was prepared have been fulfilled.

Beginning of Cricket

There are some evidences of a similar game having been played in the Fourteenth century, but it is probable that cricket was not known until some time in the Sixteenth century.

Unsubstantial

A tramp in a very ragged coat was asked what material it was made of. "I dunno," he said, "but I think it's mostly fresh air."

Now, blessings light on him that first invented sleep. It covers man all over, thoughts and all, like a cloak.—Christopher Marlowe.

Odd Use for Elephants

Elephants were used to keep the crowd of curious natives from the airplane of an air exploring party in India recently, but the animals had to be watched to keep them from sitting on the plane.

Land Made Fruitful

Shaft Would Have Value

It is strange that an expedition into the earth's interior has never been seriously attempted. If we could sink a shaft only twelve miles into the ground we might strike all the coal and oil that would be needed in millions of years. In all likelihood we should find radium, gold, silver, diamonds, and other gems of untold wealth, as well as wonderful new metals and fresh sources of energy.—Exchange.

Sahara Once Fertile?

Arabian tradition is that water was still abundant when the Arabs first entered the Sahara in the Seventh century, and that the drying-up process was not completed until the Thirteenth century.

STRAIGHT TALKS WITH AUNT EMMY

ON A NARROW ESCAPE

"Oh, Aunt, I just have to talk to you," said Maud, bursting in on Aunt Emmy. "Those bonds Tom's father gave us for a wedding present have matured and Tom has the money. A man is trying to get Tom to invest in a radio company. I want your opinion on it."

"Don't hurry, tell me everything you can remember," said Aunt Emmy.

"Well, Tom didn't seem enthusiastic. Then Mr. Brown, the salesman, said that if he bought stock in his company, and wanted his money at any time, the company would buy back his stock."

"Are you sure he said that?" interrupted Aunt Emmy. "That is a claim that is not made by people connected with dependable investment houses. Unless you have an agreement with the company clearly stating that it will repurchase its stock, signed by one of its officers, you would have great difficulty in getting the company to buy back your stock. A company cannot be compelled to repurchase its own stock. Do you know who Mr. Brown is?"

"No," replied Maud. "Neither does Tom, but he seems awfully nice and Tom liked him right from the start. He is good looking, well dressed, and has beautiful manners."

Aunt Emmy sniffed. "Did he offer to sell you preferred stock on which dividends are guaranteed?"

"Why, how did you know, Aunt?" exclaimed Maud. "That is exactly what he did."

"I thought so," said Aunt Emmy. "Reliable stock salesmen don't promise that a company will repurchase its stock, nor do they promise guaranteed dividends. Unless a company operates profitably, it cannot pay honest dividends of any sort, guaranteed or otherwise. You can see how foolish it is to believe that you can get dividends just because some one says they are guaranteed. The only guarantee in the world for dividends is the successful operation of a company. Guaranteed dividends is a gift phrase used by unscrupulous persons to get money from unthinking ones. A white back the country was flooded with fake oil stock. Now dishonest promoters are trying radio stock."

"What shall I do?" cried Maud. "Tom is with Mr. Brown now at the store to buy the stock with the bond money."

"You just go to the phone and call Tom," said Aunt Emmy. "Ask him and Mr. Brown to meet you at the bank at ten o'clock. Tell him not to buy the stock until you talk with him again. Half the money is yours. Then call the bank and make an appointment with the vice president to discuss an investment."

About noon Aunt Emmy's telephone rang. It was Maud. "The queerest thing happened, Aunt," she said. "Mr. Brown agreed to meet us at the bank at ten o'clock. Tom and I waited until eleven and he never showed up. Then Tom told the vice president about it and he said we had a lucky escape. Only last week the bank looked up the company Mr. Brown represented and it is absolutely no good!"—A. B. Aymes.

TO MAKE FARMING YIELD BETTER RETURNS

The outstanding possibilities of co-operative marketing are more largely along the lines of standardizing and improving production, eliminating excess varieties, standardizing and improving grade and pack, stabilizing production, regulating flow to market, improving distribution as between markets, developing new markets, collective bargaining, betterment of financing, correcting trade abuses, and representing producers before legislative and administrative bodies, says H. E. Erdman, associate professor in California College of Agriculture. All of these should, of course, result in higher net returns, he says, adding:

"If I were to list the limitations I should put them about as follows:

"1. Co-operation cannot fix prices that are out of line with supply and demand conditions.

"2. Co-operation cannot eliminate the middleman. It can, and does, of course, establish the farmers' own agencies to take the places of private agencies and often puts one co-operative agency where several dealers formerly operated.

"3. Co-operation cannot reduce costs greatly except in so far as an increase in scale of operations makes for lower costs. Some of the gains of large scale operation, however, are dissipated because of tendencies toward extravagance.

"4. Co-operatives will not run alone. Constant attention is required on the part of the membership because 'what is everybody's business is nobody's business.'

"5. Co-operation does not permit the farmer to hold his products for a higher price without also compelling him to assume the risks of getting a lower price.

"6. The outsider often gets as much of the benefit of co-operative marketing as does the member, and in some cases gets more because he does not have to bear his share of certain development expenses. This is a decided handicap to co-operation."

WEAK, RUN-DOWN NERVOUS, DIZZY

Mrs. Lee Suffered From All These Troubles, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her Well

Terre Haute, Indiana.—"I was weak and run-down and in such a nervous condition that I could hardly do my work. I was tired all the time and dizzy, had no appetite and could not sleep. I tried different medicines for a year but they did not help me. Then my husband saw the ad. for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the newspapers and had me take it. I regained my strength and never felt better in my life. I completely restored me to health. I had practically no suffering when my baby boy was born and he is very strong and healthy. I know that the Vegetable Compound is the best medicine a woman can take before and after childbirth for health and strength. I would be willing to answer letters from women asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Wm. J. Lee, Route E, Box 648, Terre Haute, Indiana.

How about the debt you owe, which keeps you worrying at night, when you should be asleep and recovering your energy? That debt probably represents neglect of yourself. Limitations

Little John had gone to a rural community with his mother and he had been taken from house to house on the adjoining ranches of his relatives. At every home he had been well fed, both at meal time and in between times.

The last place they called was at his grandmother's and he had no sooner arrived than his grandmother started for the cupboard.

"Keep your seat, grandma," said John sorrowfully, "I have been eaten everywhere and even a little boy has got to quit some time."

"Now he goes running out along the walls searching for something. Look! Here! He ran out along the base of the wall searching."

"For what?"

"For bits of wood—for anything that would burn—for fuel. He must have a funeral pyre. He has been crazed by fear again. But he finds nothing. Brena. There is no wood here, no paper, no grass. There's nothing but sand and stone. Let him run about till he drops. There is no mercy for him. Nothing that will burn. Nothing within a half a hundred miles. Like Hennepin, he too now screams and the scream comes back from the cliff with a terrible mockery."

"But he did find fuel, Peter," she said. "He must have found something."

"Yes, he found something that would do—no very well, as we can see. He had hoped for better results than he got. Come."

On the way toward the gate of the fortification walls Peter stopped and kicked at a blackened spot on the sand. He said laconically, "Their fire. Where they ate their last supper together—the vanished men."

The sun had dropped below the mountains above the mesa; its needed fire had settled down into a hot layer of dull, sullen heat. But beyond the wall where their car stood the open desert, bare, cruel, with the heat waves running like endless herds of sheep along the quivering horizon, was a relief from that strange spell of the dried well, the ruins, the fine yellow-gray dust, and the silence.

Brena filled her lungs as one does who has come from the interior of a mortuary.

"Peter," she said.

"Yes, dear."

"I want to tell you, Peter, that you need not worry about me. I am all right. It is necessary for me to know. And I'm going to know, Peter, without any weakening. We've come too far for that."

He took her hand.

"I'm not willing to let this make a scar on me, Peter," she said. "I've paid in full before this. So show me. And then let's turn toward the earning of our ways."

"Our way," he insisted, correcting her. "Not ways. The earning of our way, together."

She shook her head a little as if some doubt had stirred within, but they were outside the wall now and Peter's eyes were upon that which he had seen before.

He dropped behind her and turned her body so that she faced toward the bend in the southern end of the fortification wall.

"There," said he, "You did not see it as we drove in."

Standing on the desert, like a ragged unkempt impropriety, was the ruin of a touring car. All that was left of its top was hanging in wispy strips on the metal frame, its paint and varnish had almost gone, the tires had hardened and crumbled on the wheels, shreds of dry rotted leather dangled from the cushions. Motionless, dead, silent as all else, the car, as if it were a shabby outcast thrown out to die, appeared disconsolate, ready to send forth a wail of loneliness into the emptiness. It had turned its back upon Pueblo Mesquero, as if it had wanted to go away but could not.

"He came in that, Peter?" Brena asked.

"Yes."

"But never took it away. Did he kill himself?"

"No," Peter answered. "A great abstract justice—a great equity from which there was no appeal—sat in trial of him here. I tell you, Brena, the thing is of magnificent, awe-inspiring dignity. It's a tremendous thing—an unforgettable majesty of inexorable dealing out of sentences. The place of his crime was the scene of his trial, his conviction and sentence. He died as Hennepin had died—of thirst."

Brena started to speak.

"No, not yet," Peter said. "As Hennepin had suffered, so he suffered. More, perhaps, because in his car—just as we have—he had a two-days' supply of water. Do you see that black thing out there on the desert? It is a metal container for water. He was so crazed that he had tried to drag it along with him on a hopeless journey through the sand. When he lost hope after many miles he dragged it back, tapping its contents to wet his cracking lips until the last drop was gone."

"But the car?" she asked. "What happened to the car?"

"The car was all right," replied Peter. "Come this way. Don't go in front of it. Look behind it—the tracks it had made from the enclosure entrance. But here it stopped. Oh,

I tell you, it is a thing of stateliness—as if some great hand had come down."

Brena stared at him in open-eyed wonderment.

"He was the instrument of justice—he himself," Peter went on. "A man who would save his life, lost it. The madness of fear brought all that he had to fear—and more."

He paused.

"Brena, I will tell you," he said in a hushed, awed voice. "The man was mad, irresponsible, without power to reason. He was in a panic of fear. He wanted to hide his crime at any cost. He had filled his gasoline tank for the return journey. Look!"

Peter pointed to the hole in the back of the car into which the gasoline is poured. The screw cap had gone. A bent copper pipe still dangled out of that hole.

"He wanted a hat-full of gasoline. That was the fuel, Brena—the fuel to burn the remains of Jim Hennepin."

He wet his lips.

"He used a siphon. This bent copper pipe taken from his tool chest—a spare length of oil feed pipe! And with that he filled his hat and ran back."

Peter looked up into the sky. He went on quietly. "And the siphon ran on. He had forgotten it. It ran on with its little stream saturating the sand until the tank was empty and the heat of the day was evaporating the last drops at the bottom. Patience had condemned himself to death! He had lost the fuel he had put in for the return journey!"

Brena pressed her lips tightly together and for many moments looked into the great fanlike spread of the sunset. Then suddenly she turned toward the car and took several steps.

"No," said Peter firmly. "You mustn't."

"I must know, Peter, beyond a shadow of a doubt."

"He is there—nothing for you to see, dear. He must have had the delusion at last that he could drive the car. He's there—at the wheel—fallen forward. And so—"

She looked up.

"And so—to be sure—I took the watch—a gold one—this one. Is it his?"

He held it out on the palm of his hand.

"Yes, it is—his, Peter."

He looked down at it a moment; then tossed it into the sand as one tosses aside a poisonous fungus.

"Peter."

"Yes."

"We mustn't let this go with us when we go—following us away. We must leave them both—here."

She took his hand.

"I am sure. For myself I can answer. I know the desert has served some great Will. The book is closed."

They slept upon one great square blanket spread on the open desert beneath the stars while the pale moon moved on its great silver arc across the heavens. The Pueblo Mesquero was far behind; from it they had ridden for miles in awed silence. And when they had reached a stopping place upon a rise of ground, neither had dared an expression. Aching with weariness they had looked at each other mutely and flung themselves down.

Now the second morning, like the first, came over the desert's edge with a host of golden lances; again the air of the desert became a haze of luminous violet hanging above the red and yellow sands and waiting for that clang when the yellow glare was flung forward again over the plain.

Brena awoke, sat up, unbraided her hair and tossed it loose with her fingers. Something within her, that had been growing with the slow growth of stalwart long life, that had suffered no blight, that subconsciously she had protected and nurtured for an unseen end, that had been made ready to withstand assaults by tragic winds, that had lived apart and immune from taint, was now free. As she threw out her arms toward the sun, so now this thing within her for the first time came forth from its depths to greet a dawn of its own.

It was not a thing asking for dramatic crises or for summits of joy; it only asked for the ultimate romance—that of the continuity of a full, strong, human life—the adventure of adventures into which the soul throws mind and body, thought and flesh, nerve and will. And because she had found her mate in this ultimate romance, Brena bent over and kissed Peter's lips.

He smiled in his sleep, and slowly his body moved and his eyes opened.

"Where are we going, Peter?" she asked.

"Somewhere with you," he said, sitting up. "Somewhere with you. I suppose we'll have to be married, dear one. But I feel that we were something more than that a long, long time ago."

He turned toward the east and the first flood of golden light illumined his face.

"Do you know, Brena, that there is something not weighed by science and the philosophies, not reckoned by governments nor laws nor customs. It is something that is ours—some new-born thing without material existence, some immortal spirit that we have created—you and I—long ago."

Brena moved her head up and down in silent assent. She sat with her hands clasped in her lap, her dark eyes moist, and a calm smile upon her sensitive, flexible lips.

For now she knew that he too understood the way to the greatest of all the mysteries.

Solution of Last Week's Puzzle.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

Two Letters

The first written twenty years ago, the second recently by Mrs. J. H. Bourland, Frankston, Texas.

June 2, 1904, she writes:—

"For twenty-three years I was a constant sufferer from chronic catarrh. I had a severe misery and burning in the top of my head, a continual dropping of mucus into my throat causing frequent expectoration. My entire system became involved and I grew worse. It seemed as if I could not recover from a constant cough and frequent attacks of bilious colic. My bowels were affected, causing alarming hemorrhages. I tried many remedies and finally took Pe-ru-na. In three days I was relieved of my bowel trouble and entirely cured by five bottles. I most cheerfully recommend Pe-ru-na."

June 30, 1924, Mrs. Bourland writes again:—

"I will soon be seventy-nine years old and enjoy good health for one of my age. I still recommend Pe-ru-na and take it myself when necessary."

For more than half a century Pe-ru-na has a proud record of good deed. Men and women the world over stand ready to testify to its value in the treatment of all catarrhal disorders.

A Pageantry of Grace

By REV. H. OSTROM, D. D.
Extension Department, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

TEXT—There met Him ten men that were lepers. He said unto them go show yourselves unto the priests. And it came to pass that as they went they were cleansed. And one of them when he saw that he was healed turned back and with a loud voice glorified God. And Jesus answering said, Were there not ten cleansed but where are the nine?—Luke 17:12, 19.

Behold the sufferers. So great is their physical agony that Jesus is given to mentioning lepers as exhibits of suffering. Behold these suddenly cured. Behold the one separated from the nine returning and with a loud voice giving glory to God. The loud voice is suggestive because leprosy produces hoarseness, and now that he is cured his voice sounds strong.

But what a mistake is made by considering striking incidents in the Bible as mere occurrences. Everything there has a meaning deeper down than the surface of the event. This is one of the many superhuman credentials of the Bible, and this is one of the reasons why it is absurd to speak of the Holy Scriptures as literature. They are so definitely above and superior to man's literature that their singularity classifies them positively alone.

If we ask why Jesus would send these ten men to the priests and why they were healed before they could reach the priests and what significance there might be in the return of this one leper to tell his gratitude to Jesus, and in Jesus' inquiry, "Where there not ten cleansed? But where are the nine?" we are brought face to face with reasons rich with His love.

"Go show yourselves unto the priests!" Jesus is really saying, "Go, keep the law." To the law, to the law! Ah, he came to fulfill the law. With Him the law is holy. And lo, before they reach the priests they are healed.

There is reason for Jesus' question, "Where are the nine?" when only one of all returned to give glory to God. On the one hand is the law. "The force of it is in Jesus' word 'Go.'" On the other hand is Jesus adding another proof that "the law came by Moses" but that He brought grace and truth. He alone could fulfill the law.

There it is plain as day. Our reproach of sin finds us trying to be cured, sometimes even boasting of how nearly we keep the Ten Commandments. But let a soul once really meet Jesus, and how soon he ceases trying. He loses all his boast about what he can do and cries, "The gift, the gift of God." He sees what Jesus has done. That is enough. He cannot get to the doing but has got to the cleansing. There is therefore now no condemnation. Into his heart has come the new law of life in Christ Jesus, and he will give glory to God.

Jesus has taken the dreaded disease and its cure as an illustration for us. Himself the true High Priest, he has proved that no journey to the temple is required. When he is really accepted on the highway the very next step is to thank Him that it is done. There stands the glorious gospel truth for us today. Jesus accepted—in factory, school or office, on the farm, in the market, on ship or in car—then the thanksgiving.

For the curing of so terrible a disease as leprosy does not greatly signify unless the healed one has in his spirit the tribute of thanksgiving. Those nine, who knows which way they turned? This one saw Jesus. The last view we have of him is with Jesus and glorifying God. Strong words these to tell of a man who but now was a poor leper.

Confidence

The ground of my confidence, the joy I find in believing in God and in His Christ, is enrooted in the hope that I may still improve; for if I could be certain that I should never become wiser or more unselfish or more loving, I should despair and feel there is no God. Since, then, my capacity for self-improvement is the mainspring of my happiness, I am senseless if I do not strive day by day to grow better, more reverent, more self-devoted, more lowly-minded, more loving.—J. L. Spaulding.

Seeing God

Life is saved from narrowing littleness when a man sees God. Then duty becomes divine, however humble, however great its drudgery, when viewed as a part of a divine whole. When a man sees God, he sees everything through God, every common thing is holy, and every bush is ablaze with fire which is never quenched. That is the secret of true life—an expanding consciousness and enlarging obligation.—J. Stuart Holden.

In the Service of God

By enlisting in the service of God we enter the one profession which is continuous through time and eternity, in which the work done here and now contributes to the great hereafter, in which nothing is lost or left out, but all our efforts which are made "in Christ" move on, accumulating in one ever-broadening stream.—E. A. Burroughs.

Lesson for September 13

PAUL IN THESSALONICA AND BEREA

LESSON TEXT—Acts 17:1-15.
GOLDEN TEXT—"Prove all things; hold fast that which is good."—1 Thessa. 5:21.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Loving God's Word.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Studying God's Word.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Two Kinds of Hearers.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Searching the Scriptures.

I. Paul Preaching in Thessalonica (vv. 1-4).

1. His Method (vv. 1-2).
He observed the divine order, to the Jews first wherever he went (Acts 1:8; Rom. 2:9-10). He was exceedingly anxious for his kinsmen in the flesh, but whenever they proved themselves unworthy, he turned to the Gentiles. His own kinsmen first should be the method of every missionary, but should not stop there. He went out on the Sabbath day so as to find them assembled together.

2. His Message (v. 3).

His message was always and ever the same, viz., that Jesus is the Christ. To the Jew the essential thing was to be convinced from the Scriptures. So Paul expounded to them the Scriptures. This is the business of all ministers, to expound the Scriptures, to prove their positions by the Word. Concerning the Christ, he set forth three propositions:

(1) The Scriptures prove that Christ must be a sufferer (v. 3). "It behooved Christ to suffer." No plain reference need be made than Isaiah 53, but it seems that the rabbis of that time had explained away the fact of a suffering Messiah so that the Jewish people were only looking for a glorious and powerful king to come; therefore they rejected Christ because of His lowly appearance. The same method of exegesis is employed by many Bible teachers and preachers today. Only the emphasis is placed upon the literal suffering of the Messiah, while they spiritualize and allegorize the teaching of the glorious coming of the Messiah to judge His enemies and to reign upon the earth (II Sam. 7:8-16; Isa. 53; Jer. 23:5-8; Zech. 9:14; Luke 1:1-3; Acts 15:14-17).

(2) That Christ Must Rise Again From the Dead (v. 3).

This he proved by the Scriptures. The resurrection of Christ, and the bodily resurrection of believers, needs sound and practical exposition in our churches today.

(3) That the Historic Jesus Whom He Proclaimed Did Suffer and Rise From the Dead; Therefore, He Is That Christ, the Predicted Messiah (v. 3).

II. The Attitude of the Jews (vv. 4-10a).

While some Jews believed and many Greeks, the envy of certain Jews was so aroused at Paul's success that they gathered together the worthless fellows of the town and set on foot a riot. They assaulted the house of Jason and dragged him before the rulers, having failed to get the missionaries. In their indictment of the missionaries they uttered unwittingly some great truths. They said: "These that have turned the world upside down." It is true that the gospel is revolutionary, but it is not treason to right government. The real truth, however, is that the world is now upside down. The work of the gospel is to set it right side up. They turned the preaching of Paul into a specious lie. He did preach the kingship of Jesus (see verse 7), but not as they endeavored to make it appear. Jesus is most assuredly coming to reign on this earth (Ps. 2). Let all men acknowledge Him in humble submission.

III. Paul Preaching in Berea (vv. 10b-15).

1. His Method (v. 10).
He entered the Jewish synagogue and preached Jesus unto them.

2. The Reception of the Gospel by the Bereans (vv. 11-12).

It was with gladness of heart. The message was just as new to these Jews and just as counter to their way of thinking as it was to the Thessalonian Jews, but they had a more noble disposition. The success of the gospel depends altogether on the disposition of the hearers. Two things are said of them:

(1) They received the message gladly.

(2) They searched the Scriptures daily for the truthfulness of the preaching. For this worthy act Paul says they were more noble than those at Thessalonica.

Permanent roads are a good investment
—not an expense

How Much Are Poor Roads Costing You?

5,000,000 of America's 18,000,000 motor vehicles are recognized as an economic necessity on the farm.

Is your car giving the full efficiency of which it is capable—and at the lowest cost per mile possible?

Not if you are jolting over bumps and ruts. Not if you get stuck in the mud.

In addition to the time you thus lose along the way, you also pay from one to four cents a mile more in gasoline, tire and repair bills than you would pay on permanently paved highways.

Think, too, how many so-called improved roads have gone to pieces within the past few years, thereby piling up huge maintenance and rebuilding costs.

Contrast all this with the record of Concrete Roads—the roads that have repair built out and maintenance built in. Firm, rigid and unyielding, free of bumps, ruts, holes, mud and dust, they are, in every way, the most economical roads.

Tell your highway officials you want more Concrete Roads. Such an investment will pay you big dividends year after year.

Let us give you all the facts about Concrete Roads, including the experience of other communities. Ask for our free booklet, R-3.

KEEPING ILLINOIS HEALTHY

Tens of thousands of persons are daily availing themselves of the free physical examinations provided by the Illinois Department of Public Health at county and district fairs where state exhibits are being shown this summer. The above picture shows a line of patrons at the health booth under one of the "big tops" awaiting their turns to be weighed, measured, tested for blood pressure and receive a thorough examination by medical experts.

State shows include also exhibits by the Department of Agriculture where the divisions of plant and animal industry demonstrate methods approved by Governor Small for eradicating the deadly white snake root and for stamping out tuberculosis among cattle. All exhibits carry a growing white snake root plant, that stock growers may study the noxious pest at close range.

A fanning mill is in operation at another booth, demonstrating proper methods of cleaning seed. Life size photos of prize egg-laying hens and the latest thing in poultry house construction form an interesting and instructive display.

Motion pictures, industrial and scenic, all filmed in Illinois, occupy another large tent, and are free to all. The welfare branch of the state government has an exhibit showing the handicraft of inmates of institutions, the blind, the deaf and other handicapped wards of "Mother" Illinois.

The highway division shows huge illuminated maps of the two great hard roads systems, with progress to date shown. Miniature canals, filled with real water carrying boats, show how the Illinois waterways are being constructed and how the immense locks operate.

The exhibits are staged by authority of the legislature, which voted appropriations to defray expenses of carrying vital educational campaigns directly to the people through the medium of county fairs.

Its Advantage

They were discussing the advantages of the various college courses. "So you've decided on an art course instead of a scientific course?" inquired the girl. "Oh, yes," answered the youth, "it seemed the better course for me." Her next question was, "Why?" and his reply to that was, "Well, everybody says it's easier to forget."
